Wan Long, WH Group Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, said: "WH Group has ranked on the 'Global 500' List once again, which has fully demonstrated the company's ability to effectively deal with external challenges and operating risks as well as maintaining steady development. The past year has been a challenging year for most of the companies. As the world's largest pork company, WH Group has faced a series of challenges including the COVID19 pandemic, African swine fever and geo-political relations. The company has adopted various measures to prevent the pandemic and maintained stable business operations, resulting from the cohesion and contribution of the global management team. While maintaining stable production and operation, the Company strives to ensure food supply, protect employees' safety and actively perform the responsibilities in the role of global 500 companies. In the future, the Company's management team will continue to promote the core objectives of stable and sustainable development, adapt to consumer market changes, actively advocate the strategic deployment of informatization and digitalization, focus on the expansion and integration opportunities in the global market and further strengthen its leading position in the industry."
