For the 18th time, Canadian Corporate Knights has published their annual ranking of the world's 100 most sustainable companies, based on a number of key environmental, social and governance (ESG) metrics. Global bioscience company Chr. Hansen has been included on the Global top 100 list for the past five years and this year ranks as no. 2.

"Working for a better world is deeply rooted in our organizational culture. As a company, this gives us a very strong purpose that is closely linked to sustainability in a broad sense, and which our employees fully identify with and take pride in. We are grateful for the ranking and appreciate the good collaboration with our customers who support our continued journey. It reinforces our daily pursuit to grow a better world through our microbial solutions," notes Graber.
