The Seafood Task Force, a trade association representing members of global tuna and Thai shrimp supply chains, is expanding its activities across the Asia Pacific.

Founded in 2014, the association brings together some of the world's largest retailers, seafood brands, and their partners in the seafood industry to drive supply chain oversight and continuous improvement.

They aim to serve more than 350 million customers globally by producing fully traceable, ethically produced, and environmentally responsible seafood that meets international social and environmental standards and growing due diligence requirements.

Recently, 17 companies from India, Indonesia, and Vietnam joined the trade association's 30 existing seafood industry members at a summit in Bangkok, as announced in a press release. This signifies a significant expansion in the geographical reach of the organization. Among the newest members are Avanti Frozen Foods, Kader Exports, and Devi Seafoods - India's largest exporter of shrimp.
