

Alaska Airlines elevates premium inflight retail menu with main cabin hot meals

23 May 2024 | News

A newly expanded chef-curated menu is now available for purchase in premium class and main cabin

A newly expanded chef-curated menu is now available for purchase in premium class and main cabin

Alaska Airlines is elevating its premium onboard menu with the return of hot meals to the inflight retail menu in the Main Cabin. Fueled by an industry-leading pre-order program, the inflight menu offers more choices than any other U.S. airline.

Premium Class and Main Cabin guests on most flights over 1,100 miles will be able to choose from up to five chef-curated dishes, including at least one hot meal option. Along with our freshly prepared food offerings like our Signature Fruit & Cheese Platter, hot meals are only available for pre-order purchase.

Over the last few months, Food & Beverage teams have been working to elevate already premium in-flight meals, including expanding our hot meal options on most medium- to long-haul flights.

"We're known for an inflight menu that is more thoughtfully curated with care. For a while now, our guests have often asked us if we're ever going to bring back hot meals in the Main Cabin," said Todd Traynor-Corey, managing director of guest products at Alaska Airlines. "It's been difficult to keep it a secret - but for more than a year, our team has quietly worked behind the scenes taste testing the best hot food options with our culinary chef and creating a West Coast-inspired menu. Now no matter where they sit, guests will get to taste our world-class food and beverages."