

Pachamama Coffee partners with UC Davis

26 September 2024 | News

This collaboration unites Pachamama's gold standard for sustainability in coffee with UC Davis's renowned leadership in sustainability and farm-to-fork initiatives

This collaboration unites Pachamama's gold standard for sustainability in coffee with UC Davis's renowned leadership in sustainability and farm-to-fork initiatives

Pachamama Coffee, a globally recognised farmer-owned coffee company, announces a partnership with UC Davis to serve its premium organic coffee at two ASUCD-run Coffee Houses (CoHos) on the university campus in Davis and across Sacramento's entire UC Davis Health campus. This collaboration unites Pachamama's gold standard for sustainability in coffee with UC Davis's renowned leadership in sustainability and farm-to-fork initiatives.

Pachamama Coffee is fully owned and governed by smallholder farmers across Latin America and Africa. This unique business model empowers farmers to maintain control and governance over their product from seed to cup, ensuring the highest-quality coffee reaches consumers while returning all profits to the farmers. By choosing Pachamama Coffee, UC Davis students, faculty, staff, patients, and visitors will enjoy premium coffee while supporting a business that prioritises farmers' livelihoods and environmental stewardship.

"We are thrilled to partner with UC Davis and, for the first time, directly connect a North American university with coffee growers globally," says Thaleon Tremain, Co-Founder & CEO of Pachamama Coffee. "Pachamama was born in Davis, where we launched the country's first farmer-owned coffee brand out of a garage. It's an honour to serve our coffee here at home to a community that shares our vision of empowering smallholder farmers and regenerative farming practices."

•