

Tanoto Foundation and Gates Foundation to advance health and nutrition in Asia

06 May 2025 | News

This partnership is a significant step toward unlocking new possibilities for systems change in Asia

This partnership is a significant step toward unlocking new possibilities for systems change in Asia

Tanoto Foundation and Gates Foundation announced the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) to explore collaborative efforts aimed at unlocking human potential and helping communities thrive across Asia. The MoU brings together the two foundations' shared commitment and experience in advancing healthcare, nutrition, education, and strengthening the philanthropic ecosystem in the region.

Through this partnership, the two foundations build on their existing relationship to collaborate and work together to identify, design, and implement joint initiatives in areas including Public health and healthcare delivery, Maternal and child nutrition, Access to quality education and strengthening the philanthropic ecosystem and capacity-building in Asia.

"This partnership is a significant step toward unlocking new possibilities for systems change in Asia and builds on our existing impactful programs," said Belinda Tanoto, member of the Board of Trustees, Tanoto Foundation. "In today's rapidly changing world, the challenges we face are complex and interconnected, from widening funding gaps to the rising disparity between rich and poor. No single organisation, no matter how large or resourceful, can tackle these issues alone. That's why collaboration is so critical. By partnering with like-minded organisations like the Gates Foundation, we can leverage our collective strengths to catalyse lasting change. We believe that when we invest in people, we unlock human potential and transform futures. Through collaboration, we can work together to create more impactful, sustainable solutions that reach the communities that need them the most."