Al Ain Farms Partners with Finland's Foodiq to Launch Cutting-Edge FoodTech in the UAE

Al Ain Farms has announced a strategic partnership with Finland-based FoodTech innovator Foodiq, bringing the revolutionary Multi-Layer Cooking (MLC) technology to the UAE, marking the first-ever industrial-scale adoption of this advanced platform outside of Finland.

This next-generation technology represents a major leap forward in food production. MLC enables the creation of clean-label, additive-free products across dairy, plant-based, and hybrid categories using a gentler, energy-efficient process that preserves nutritional integrity and minimises food waste.

“This partnership with Foodiq is a bold step toward the future of food manufacturing,” Al Ain Farms stated. “As consumer expectations continue to shift toward healthier and more sustainable choices, this collaboration equips us to meet those demands while maintaining our focus on innovation and quality.”

By integrating MLC technology into its operations, Al Ain Farms aims to diversify its product offerings and future-proof its portfolio, staying ahead of industry trends and reinforcing its commitment to health, sustainability, and cutting-edge innovation.

With this partnership, Al Ain Farms and Foodiq are poised to reshape the food landscape, driving change from the UAE with a global impact.
