Hormel Foods Appoints Paul Kuehneman as Chief Accounting Officer

11 September 2026 | News

Kuehneman will lead the company's accounting organization and oversee its tax function, creating greater alignment across these important areas of the finance organization

Hormel Foods Corporation, a Fortune 500 global branded food company, announced the appointment of Paul Kuehneman as chief accounting officer.

In this role, Kuehneman will lead the company's accounting organization and oversee its tax function, creating greater alignment across these important areas of the finance organization. He will work closely with Ash Bhumbla, executive vice president and chief financial officer, to support the company's finance strategy and operations.

"Paul is a respected leader whose deep understanding of our business, financial expertise and commitment to our people make him exceptionally well-suited for this role," said John Ghingo, president, Hormel Foods. "Paul's experience and perspective will serve him well in this expanded role."

With more than three decades of experience at Hormel Foods, Kuehneman most recently served as interim chief financial officer and controller, helping guide the company through an important leadership transition.
